

ABSTRACT

5 A system that facilitates age verification of machine data reader. A component associated with the machine data reader determines age-related data based at least in part upon data obtained from encoded data on an identification card. A component relays the age-related data to a point-of-sale system in a format that is compatible with the point-of sale system.